CHARACTER LESSONS IN AMERICAN BIOGRAPHY.

ADAPTED FOR THE USE OF THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

By JAMES T. WHITE.

Example is a living law whose sway

Men more than all the written laws obey.

Sir Charles Sedley.

COPYRIGHT BY JAMES T. WHITE & Co., 1906.

The crown and glory of life is character. It dignifies every station, exalts every position in society, and commands the confidence and respect of mankind. Character constitutes real aristocracy, for it is the only true heraldry of man. It is the throne and crown and scepter of a nation. Character is human nature in its best form, and its possession should be the highest object of life. It commands a far greater power and influence than even education or wealth. The examples of men of character never die, but, like their memories, are immortal.

But the welfare and safety of the State is entirely dependent upon character. More than law and legislation the crying need is for greater private virtue and more individual integrity. Never until recently has been so conclusively demonstrated the close connection between the welfare of the State and the conduct of the individual, and the inevitable destruction that awaits a nation made up of self-seekers, graft-grabbers and justice-jugglers.

Throughout Christendom there is a general demand for improved moral teaching. England demands it, as she claims, "to maintain commercial supremacy." France demands it "for the maintenance of the family, and the safe preservation of the State." The German Emperor is making an appeal for the glorification of the Fatherland, half religious and half patriotic; and our own President is urging the necessity of a "square deal" and an improved quality of private character "for the Welfare of the State."

In Japan exactly our present problem arose long ago through the same cause,—the multiplicity of jealous religious beliefs. Japan realized that its very life would be threatened if public education and moral training were allowed to be completely divorced. A national commission accordingly arranged to utilize Patriotism as a moral agent, with the result that to-day Japanese primers and readers give biographical sketches with inspiring knowledge of the greatest personalities, not only of Japan, but of the world—their splendid private characters, their heroism in war, their public services in peace. And it is said that the average Japanese boy to-day knows more definitely and concretely of George Washington than do our American youth.

But all agree that the only remedy is by having moral instruction taught to the children in the public schools. Marshall Field and other prominent business men of Chicago, employing thousands of boys and girls, have recently petitioned for improved instruction in the public schools along moral lines, affirming their belief that the school-boy of to-day is less reliable and morally inferior to the children taught under the old regime, when moral and religious teaching held greater place.

In a recent address at Cornell University Dr. Andrew D. White, one of the foremost educators of the world, stated, "The great thing needed to be taught in this country is truth, simple ethics, the distinction between right and wrong. Stress should be laid upon what is best in biography, upon noble deeds and sacrifices, especially those which show that the greatest man is not the greatest orator, or the tricky politician. They are a curse; what we need is noble men. There is nced for religious instruction. Religious thoughts of all ages should be impressed upon the minds of the children — readings from the sacred books, the story of Joseph, the Sermon on the Mount, the wonderful writings of St. Paul. An edurated man who has not these in his memory is to be pitied."

But it is not religious instruction alone that is needed, as is proved by the condition in countries where the Church has had complete charge of education. It is moral instruction, combined with a convincement of the duties and obligations owed to the State, that is needed for the realization of the Republic's ideals.

Religion is not the exclusive possession of the Church. Religious life is simply the life of right living and right relationship, and these bases of religion may be brought to bear upon human life through the State, as well as the Church. The State, like the Church, endeavors to express the inexpressible, and has its symbols in the Seal of State, the Scales of Justice, the Sword of Truth. Men have always been seeking after the Holy Grail; but when it is found, it will always be the "holy Communal" life, which finds its highest expression in the State. The objectives of religion are the enlargement of the soul to the appreciation of God, and the enlargement of the heart to embrace the Brotherhood of man. While the Church substitutes for these great natural religious forces, a doctrine, a creed, the State energizes them in the heart and genius of the soul—as Endeavor, and in the work and life of the man among men, as Citizenship.

Citizenship may not be a large enough word; but all the inter-human relationships are included in this Civic Religion. Religion is relationship; and of all relations the Civic is the highest, and holiest, for out of this are developed the noblest qualities of Character.

We have a long list of political Saints: One left luxury and assumed the responsibilities of a desperate cause, for the sake of his fellowmen, not expecting to be called the Father of his Country; one dared death, and found it in an effort to enfranchise an inferior race; one gave his magnificent mental gifts to the establishment of a better civic service; another undertook the work of prison reform; another, now called the Ideal of an American Citizen, opened the light upon the slums of New York; one is doing more for righteousness, purity, holiness and truth than all the churches in Denver combined.

In this new Republic the State is working out the recreation of humanity, and is taking the place of the Church in the hearts of the people, who find their religious revelations by looking into the faces of other men and women. The State, in its essential nature, is the most sacred institution possible to human life. It is the only organized relationship that is universal in its nature, and it must become the organized expression of religious truth.

The religion to-day should be a deathless love for the State, a Civic enthusiasm, which would enthrone the State in the highest and holiest place. Its alters are the work-bench, the forge, the desk, the machine, and its shrines are beauty, truth, love, honesty, strength, purity, generosity, and integrity—the qualities of a Perfect Character.

The Commonwealth is thus made the representative of morality and right-eousness, and becomes the inspiration for moral responsibility, fraternal obligation and personal consecration. This is a moral instruction, which can be taught in the public schools without infringement of freedom of thought, and is, in reality, what is meant by Dr. White, for it is a moral inspiration which must ever be subservient to conscience, that voice of God within the soul.

This country has recognized the duty and importance of compulsory education: but we cannot recreate the vicious adults, and the only possible hope for any improvement in moral instruction is through the children; and the only place to begin such regeneration is in the public schools. But the public schools are adjusted to teach only practical learning for every-day life. It is, of course, necessary that the three R's should be taught; but it is necessary to teach something more. We need to reform habits, to teach new ways of thinking, new ways of living; in other words, to improve character. It is not only book-learning that must be taught, it is honesty, industry, unselfishness, self-respect, ambition, patience, justice, responsibility—the various traits which make up personal character.

The period of a child's life, which is most susceptible to being moulded, is from five to twelve years. During this time the child is receptive to all impressions; it treasures them up; gathers them all into itself, and retains them forever. While all animal life is sensitive to environment, of all living things the child is the most susceptible. The child absorbs environment. It is the most sensitive and receptive living thing in creation. Every influence, however trivial, will leave an imprint upon the child's mind. It responds to a thousand subtle influences, which leave no impression upon the grown man; and if the environmental influences are rightly and persistently applied, the effect will be immediate and permanent. The child is the purest, truest thing in the world. It begins life stainless, and is open to receive all impressions. It is absolute truth, and that is why we all love children. The new-born child, whether brought forth in the lowest degradation or in the highest affluence and refinement, starts always the purest thing in creation, and if surrounded by right influences and nurtured by high principles it will inevitably grow to perfect manhood. The child is not impure, it learns impurity and untruth. What we need is more complete nurture, and a better environment of good influ-Upon a child before the age of twelve one has an unparalleled opportunity to work, for nowhere else in the entire creation is the material so plastic.

The great educators of the world have come to believe that this is the time, during which character is most easily cultivated, and they insist that the welfare of the State demands that the public schools shall undertake this task. All acknowledge, that in the education of a child, character is of paramount importance; but the question is, how is character to be taught? There is a woeful lack of capacity for teaching character at home, and the schools at present seem to accomplish nothing toward cultivating it, during these most precious years of impressionable youth.

There are textbooks to teach arithmetic, grammar, etc., but there is no textbook in the public schools to teach character. And yet there is such a textbook, and that is, Biography—which is example; and the supreme importance and value of this particular textbook is acknowledged by all educators. Dr. Jowett, the head master of Balliol College, Oxford, has stated that "in future morals will be taught only through biography." And the reason is, that biography is example,—with the quality of reality. If one will reflect, the injunction to a child, "Be good," has no practical force or helpfulness; but an example of resistance to temptation, an example of a good deed or self-sacrifice, takes hold of the mind of the child with invincible power, and compels imitation, because the mind responds to suggestion.

It is a psychological fact that what the mind admires, it unconsciously emulates and imitates. A trait of character which enlists our approbation, inevitably compels imitation; and when we read or hear of a noble deed or act of devotion, we are unconsciously impelled to repeat it. The boy who reads a dime novel, buys a toy pistol, and runs away to fight Indians, obeys this law of imitation; only the example is pointed the wrong way. This imitative impulse is due to the power of suggestion, which is that tremendous force behind hypnotism, and it is invincible in its power.

Character in its primary principle and groundwork is self-control and self-giving, and the only practical method of enforcing this upon the habit of children is to keep before them examples of self-control and self-sacrifice. Childhood is self-centered and selfish; but to every child there comes a time of awakening, when he realizes there is in the world somebody else besides himself, and something to do for others, and he feels a stir and a desire to do some good thing. The first great object in teaching character is to awaken this realization, and then to foster and strengthen this sense of obligation. The practical means of doing this is through illustrations of self-devotion, self-sacrifice, etc., exemplified in others; and woe to that child who does not have such examples for his uplifting, at the moment of this awakening. Ideals, and examples representing them, are the supreme moulders of youth.

Because character depends chiefly upon a man's own will and choice, it is the supreme teaching of biography. In the past "Plutarch's Lives" has proved an inspiration; but the ideals of Greek and Roman days are now changed, and the moral force — which is the peculiar advantage of the study of biography,— is lost in such examples. What is needed is a "Plutarch's Lives" in terms of the present. In the National Cyclopedia of American Biography will be found the summary of all the biographies of the United States, which Dean Stanley says, more than any other country of the world, furnishes examples of the finest men and women that have ever lived.

The following pages present a few notable examples of the various phases of character, taken from this work. In almost all cases each individual exhibits several characteristic virtues, besides the one under consideration, for character is interdependent, and those who have achieved some one grace of character are usually well rounded, and possess many. In this American Biography, containing over 25,000 names, there are thousands of other examples of fine characters in addition to the three hundred here presented, and the reading of them will furnish different illustrations to emphasize the qualities of character.

Another great assistance to character teaching is the face-to-face acquaintance with the examples presented, which quadruples the force and efficacy of the example. Educators of the present time are advocating the placing before children portraits of great men and women, who are examples for the world, to be looked at daily for the inspiration that such an atmosphere brings. The greatest study of the world is human nature, and a collection of portraits, above all other things, develops observation and throws a wondrous light on character. The face has a perpetual fascination. It tells the story of human thought, feeling, and experience. Every detail of every feature tells its own part of the story. Thoughts are mighty, positive things, and every thought, however fleeting, is registered in the delicate network of nerves that convey their message to the facial muscles.

To hold up eminent examples to youth along these lines is the greatest stimulus that can be given to any child; and it is an assistance that cannot be given at any other time of life with so much benefit. Dr. Trumbull says, "The world's interests, under God, are in the hands of the young."

"The purpose of the elementary school is to form and strengthen character, and to develop the intelligence of the children entrusted to it. With this purpose in view, it should be the aim of the school to train the children carefully in the habits of observation and clear reasoning; to arouse in them living interest in the ideals and achievements of mankind. It should be the aim of the school through the examples of noble men and women, to implant in the children habits of industry, self-control and courageous perseverance in the face of difficulties; to teach them to reverence what is noble, to be ready for self-sacrifice, to strive their utmost after purity and truth; to foster a strong respect for duty, and that respect for others, which is the foundation of unselfishness and the true basis of good manners. Such instruction will enable the children to become upright and useful members of the community, and worthy of the country in which they live." — From Introduction to Educational Code, London.

Emerson says, "I cannot even hear of personal vigor of any kind, great power of performance, without fresh resolution. * * * This is the moral of biography; yet it is hard for departed men to touch the quick, like our own companions, whose names may not last so long."

INTERPRETATION:

1. Fortitude, Courage and Heroism are sometimes considered as synonymous; they have an element in common, but there is a real difference which distinguishes each from the others, although as they are so mingled together in the same character, it is difficult to draw a sharp distinction between them. Fortitude, derived from the root of fort, carries the idea of the ability to resist attack, of possessing strength to defend. Fortitude forbids complaint, it endures pain in silence.

2. Fortitude is the virtue of the Stoics, and everyone should be enough of a Stoic to bear a certain amount of pain without flinching or outcry. This self-command really lessens pain. The person who is determined not to lose his self-command, and orders his nature to hold out, never suffers half as much pain as one who lets suffering have its way.

3. But Fortitude is more than the brave bearing of pain; it means a self-command, by which one preserves his independence, and does not let the disagreeable things of life disturb too much one's peace of mind. It is the compelling of one-self to perform the tasks which duty lays upon him. This self-command is a step towards a dominating purpose, which is a first essential to character. This self-command is helped by a proper pride. It is greatly helped by interest in other things. Let him turn his thoughts to somthing outside of himself and he will forget his pain. It is manly to bear without complaining what one must endure.

4. To bear the ills of life with Fortitude, one should learn to interest himself in things and people outside himself. And to help another bear suffering one should not merely pity, but should distract the other's attention, by some book or interesting diversion. To shrink from another's suffering because it causes us suffering, is refined selfishness.

5. Every person should train himself to bear nobly what is painful and disagreeable; not dwelling on his suffering, but making the least possible fuss about anything that is painful or unpleasant.

6. The Welfare of the State demands that every boy, while attending school, shall see to it that he bears bodily pain and mental suffering in silence; that he schools himself in self-restraint, to keep from wrong-doing; and exercises self-command, to do whatever is required of him without hesitation and without question.

APPLICATION:

The individuals selected to exemplify Fortitude, carried through life, in spite of the dispiriting effects of constant illness and frequent pain, a buoyancy of spirit and a gladness of disposition, which have made them conspicuous, as inspirers of mankind. This they have achieved, by lifting themselves out of their bodily infirmities, by forgetting self in devotion to others, through literary, political or beneficent activities.

INTERPRETATION:

1. While Fortitude consists in bearing manfully that which is painful or disagreeable, Courage consists in not shrinking from the painful or unpleasant experiences which may be de-manded of us. Fortitude will endure the amputation of a limb; Courage will do that and also face the cannon's mouth.

2. The essence of Courage is manliness and fortitude, and belief in one's strength and skill, which nothing can dismay. The root of the word is the Latin cor, heart.

3. The Courage of habit is acquired by educa-tion and discipline,—as a soldier overcomes his timidity, as a medical student his faintness at the first sight of blood, as a child gradually learns to confess a fault. The captain of a vessel that has been wrecked, exhibits Courage when he remains bravely on his vessel until every one of the crew has been saved. It required no little Courage for Commodore Craven to step aside, when his gunboat had been literally blown out of the water, and allow his pilot to leave first. There are no moments to spare at such a crisis: but the Courage of habit was so strong in Craven, that he sacrificed his life, that his pilot might be saved.

4. There are two forms of Courage, Physical and Moral. Physical Courage is the resolute facing of danger. Courage is bravery,not bravado,— which is recklessness, or frequently foolhardiness. A reckless man does not see danger. The foolhardy man makes brag and show of doing, while the Courageous man sees the danger, and bravely faces it.

"Courage is resistance to fear, mastery of ar,—not absence of fear."

fear,—not absence of fear.

5. The lack of Courage is cowardice, which has been held up to scorn from the beginning of the many common sense, a world. It implies a want of common sense, a want of belief in oneself.

6. If one, who is suffering from toothache, delays having the tooth out, he merely adds to the real pain of the tooth, the imagined pain of the pulling, which is almost always a great deal worse than that which the dentist causes. One would save himself much extra and needless pain, if he would gather Courage and resolution, and do the thing at once, and get through with it, instead of multiplying the woe over and over again by hesitation and dread.

7. Every person should make it a principle to train himself to quick resolution and immediate action in such situations. It will not only strengthen one's will power, but it will add to one's happiness.

8. Moral Courage is obeying one's convictions in the face of opposition and disapprobation; doing what the conscience says is right, against the scorn and ridicule of associates; standing up for truth and righteousness against the whole world. This is the highest kind of Courage.

- 9. It takes Courage to wear threadbare clothes, while one's companions wear broadcloth and silk. It takes Courage to remain in honest poverty, when others grow rich by questionable methods. It takes Courage to say "No" squarely, when others around you say "Yes." It takes Courage to be laughed at, scoffed, ridiculed, derided, misjudged - to stand alone with all the world against you. To espouse an unpopular cause often requires more Courage than to lead a charge in battle. But "mankind loves and admires the man who dares to look the devil in the face and tell him he is a devil." Physical and Moral Courage have been the grand leaders in the ceaseless progress of the world.
- 10. The best rules for living courageously are to act quickly, to have belief in one's own skill and ability, and to forget oneself in the deed. Those who possess the Courage born of self-forgetfulness and high moral obligation, are called Heroes.
- 11. The Commonwealth today stands in great need of courageous men to stand up for truth and righteousness, and it looks to its youth to practice this virtue in daily school life.

Funston's capture of Aguinaldo and the daring deed of Whipple are unparalleled in history. Stanley's search for Livingston in the wilds of Africa called for the highest degree of Courage.

While the Courage exhibited in these Examples carries with it also the element of Heroism, it is essentially the brave soul within the man which predominates. For additional examples of Moral Courage see also under Heroism.

Susan B. Anthony,	IV.	403*
Sam Davis.	VIII.	334
John Horn.	XIII.	463

INTERPRETATION:

1. Heroism is bravery in the helping of others, and is the climax of Fortitude and Courage; yet the heroic spirit is perceptible in those phases of character also. There are times when the greatest sacrifices must be made, when endeavor must be pushed to the utmost, when life even must be given, when hesitation and fear are cowardice.

2. There is something that often passes for Heroism, which is not Heroism at all, and deserves only contempt. This is found in those who show their strength at the expense of the weak,—those who exemplify the idea that might makes right. A "bully" is apt to be a coward, otherwise he would not show a linear to be exempted. otherwise he would not choose always to measure

- himself against the weak, rather than the strong.

  3. Others are called Heroes, who have ready strength and courage to face real peril boldly, but they do this that they may win something that does not belong to them. The fascination of this bravery, however, disappears immediately in disgust at the wretched total of their achievements. Of this stamp are very many whom the world admires. Many of the great conquerors, who have sought to win for themselves glory and power, and even wealth, without regard to the rights and happiness of others, are no better than bandits, although surrounded by more picturesque associations.
- 4. How different is military glory when it is won in the defense of one's country, or to free the oppressed! The world will some time outgrow its admiration for glory won for selfish ends, but it will never outgrow-its reverence for patriotism and chivalry. There never was a country or a time, which had not its heroes; and when we look back over the history of our country, we see how much we owe to these heroes of the past. We owe to them our liberty, and, indeed, all that makes life really worth living. There is no reading more interesting and more helpful, for it makes us feel how grand it is to be heroic, and makes us resolve to practice something of the same spirit.
  5. We speak of the Heroism of common life.

There is an underlying element of courage that is manifest in every-day affairs, as a fire, a runaway, a mad dog scare, when officers and by-standers disregard personal safety to save others. Heroism manifests itself in the contest main-tained by fathers and mothers against poverty or ill health, in the struggle to educate their chil-dren. Such heroism is as greatly to be honored as that of National heroes. Firemen are continually doing deeds of Heroism worthy of the highest praise and admiration.

6. These stories of Heroic lives should not make us forget that there are opportunities for Heroism in every-day life for everybody. A boy dreams of brave deeds he would do were he a knight-errant. But when he sees a mischievous boy tip over a poor woman's applecart, he is angry at the cruel trick, but he does not pick up her apples for fear of being laughed at, and passes by on the other side. It requires Heroism to do right, and even not to do wrong. He may be called a coward, when he is in reality brave; while they are the cowards, who side with the majority un-

7. There is nothing that strengthens the foundations of the State like the heroism of its martvrs.

APPLICATION:

As Heroism is something more than Courage, the Examples are selected to emphasize Moral Courage, though the Examples under Courage and even Fortitude also exhibit Heroism, and might be included under this trait.

Susan B. Anthony stood for woman's rights, against the ridicule of the world. Her name was a by-word of scorn, but now it is among the most honored in the nation. Garrison almost singlehanded denounced slavery, and faced death, in his unflinching advocacy of what he felt to be a righteous cause. His life shows how very early the basis of a noble character was laid, the steady growth of his convictions, and how, with the courage of a dauntless soul and the mighty power of a spotless character, he became one of the greatest warriors for humanity. Nathan Hale and Sam Davis exhibited a Heroism even unto death, which has endeared them to the hearts of mankind.

A conspicuous Example of every day heroism is John Horn. (See Vol. XIII, p. 463.) He rescued so many persons from drowning, that Congress awarded him a special gold medal. On page 140 are the names of the other Americans who have received this special medal, mostly for conspicuous acts of heroism.

INTERPRETATION:

1. For Contentment are needed both Fortitude and Courage. Fortitude to bear cheerfully whatever may be disagreeable in the present, and Courage to meet bravely the uncertainties of the future. The habit of discontent by its own nature brings on unhappiness. It entirely spoils every sweet in life, by mixing in it a little bitter. Some think that to be troubled by every little annoyance shows a superiority. One might as well be proud of a poor digestion.

2. Idleness is the main source of discontent. The habit of discontent occurs, in general, from the mistake of supposing that any arrangement

2. Idleness is the main source of discontent. The habit of discontent occurs, in general, from the mistake of supposing that any arrangement of outward things can in itself make us happy. Circumstances, in themselves, can never bring happiness. Everyone should learn the art of living; and this art consists in being able to use the circumstances of life, and not be at their mercy; to live cheerfully even when things are not precisely as we would have them.

3. Two of the habits of discontent might be

3. Two of the habits of discontent might be called the conceit of loneliness, and the conceit of a confessed peculiarity of character. These are affectations, which a little serious effort could remedy. People complain of a lack of friends, congenial surroundings, when the fault is really in themselves. A trusting in oneself makes one cyual to any circumstances.

4. Contentment is a matter of habit. We find what we look for, and what we are in the habit of looking for. So one who has found the habit of looking for pleasant things will find them, and perhaps will find little else.

5. Contentment cannot be a virtue of the idle, or the easy-going, or the ignorant, or the unmanly. It is one of the highest virtues, one of the hardest to gain or to hold,—yet it is worth all the effort it requires of us.

6. The State has achieved its highest aim, when its people are contented and happy.

APPLICATION:

This conception of Contentment is well illustrated in the Examples given. They were happy not because of the absence of hard or disagreeable experiences, not because they were away from trouble and sorrow, pain and danger, but because they developed the strength and the wisdom to cope with them successfully. They were always "in condition," to use a modern term of athletics. They were always in training, and never allowed their thoughts to become disordered and idle, or their feelings to become dull and flabby. The homes of these men were the resorts of the gentlest natures of their time.

The writings of those chosen as Examples, emphasize the serene contentment of large souls in tune with nature and the Infinite.

INTERPRETATION:

1. Contentment that is satisfied with mediocrity and insignificant results, ceases to be a virtue, and becomes a fault. "Good enough" never makes real progress, and often degenerates into shift-lessness. One should aim at perfection. One needs a little Discontent to spur him on. The habit of mind that seeks to excel, is called Ambition.

2. It is a worthy Ambition to work hard for a comfortable home. Even Ambition to be rich is worthy, but it must be remembered that riches may be purchased at too dear a price.

3. Everybody should have the Ambition to do well whatever he does, at play as well as at work: but above all it should be his Ambition to do the best things. Everyone should cultivate an Ambition to excel,—a passion for perfection.

4. No one can afford to do less than his best.

"Aspiration is inspiration." Ambition to excel, however, defeats its own purpose, if it leads to the employment of unworthy means. Ambition is neither a virtue nor a vice, although it may easily become either. It derives whatever moral quality it possesses from its object, and from the means employed in its attainment.

5. The world admires the Ambition to "get on" in the world, and to help others "get on" in it. The highest Ambition is to achieve something for the benefit of one's fellow-man.

6. Ambition excites enthusiasm, which is the compelling power that overcomes all obstacles. Enthusiasm enables one to do the work that his heart desires. It brooks no interference with the heart desires. It brooks no interference with the accomplishment of its object. What matter that young Benjamin West had neither pigment nor brush! He made color from indigo, and brushes from the cat's hair. Sumner says, "have Ambition to be remembered, not as a great lawyer, doctor, merchant or scholar, but as a great man.— every inch a king." The people with high ideals are the advance guard of humanity; they cut the smooth road over which marches future generations. road over which marches future generations. Whipping and scolding only made Ole Bull more devoted to his violin.

7. In our Republic the highest place is open to him who has the wit and ability to achieve it, which is an inspiration to the noblest ambition, and should be the goal of every youth.

APPLICATION:

Benjamin West was asked, how he attained such excellence? He replied, "By observing one simple rule,—to make each picture the best." Daniel Morgan, with all his ambition, would not betray Daniel Washington. Aaron Burr's ambition was for self.

rather than for service. Chase, Blaine, Douglas and Bryan were all aspirants for the Presidency. and were early fired with Ambition to grow out of their surroundings. Wilson's name was originally Colbath, but being inspired with the character of a Henry Wilson in a book he had read, he changed his name to that of his hero. Joseph Medill was brought up on a farm; but having access to books he was inspired to acquire an education.

Elihu Thomson,	X. 391
Marcus Whitman,	XI. 112
James J. Hill,	XIII. 354

INTERPRETATION:

- 1. Anything worth doing is beset with difficul-ties. Perseverance consists in accomplishing,—at any cost. It is a pertinacity of purpose that overcome all obstacles. It is the hinge of all virtues. Perseverance means the steady pursuit of a plan.
- 2. Excessive difficulties should least of all discourage, because the things best worth achieving are surrounded by conditions the most difficult to surmount. We must overcome a stubborn fact by a stubborn will. The difficulty frequently measures the worth. It also incites us to the improvement of our methods.
- 3. Perseverance is the statesman's brain, the warrior's sword, the inventor's secret, the scholar's open sesame. Who first consult wisely, then resolve firmly, and then execute with inflexible perseverance,- such men can advance to any eminence in life. Perseverance is the grindstone saying to the axe. "You are hard; but I am harder, and will wear you away." It is said of Marshal and will wear you away." It is said of Marshal: Field that when a boy he went to a great merchant and asked, "Do you want a boy?" "Nobody wants a boy," replied the merchant. "Do you need a boy," the boy persisted, nowise abashed. "Nobody needs a boy," was the reply. But the boy would not give up. "Well, say, Mister, do you hare to hare a boy?" "I think likely we do," replied the merchant, "and I rather think we will have to have a boy just like you."

  The difference between merceverance and observed.

The difference between perseverance and obstinacy is that one comes from a strong will, and the other comes from a strong won't.

4. Some of the helps of Perseverance are:—
A. Be sure that, while striving, you are gaining good habits, and getting something far better than what you strive for. One gets this in elementary work in schools and trades.

B. A knowledge that each year of faithful Perserverance will transform you into an abler person, and that you can then do easily, what is impossible to do today.

C. Be sure that if the work were not difficult at the start, it would not be interesting. Few satisfactions are keener than that of Perseverance patiently exercised.

To know how to wrest victory from defeat, and make stepping stones of our stumbling blocks, is the secret of success.

5. The virtue of Perseverance is illustrated also in the Examples under Fortitude, Courage and Heroism. Indeed, Perseverance accompanies very many of the virtues.

6. The benefits of a Popular Government are not attained without effort. If eternal vigilance is the price of liberty, eternal Persistence is the price of excellence, and is the duty of every lover of his country.

E. H. Chapin says, the successful are not those who wait for chances, but those who make chances. George Bancroft spent twenty-six years in writing his History of the United States. Horace Mann braided straw to get money to buy books. Cyrus W. Field was thirteen years accomplishing the laying of the Atlantic Cable. Robert Collyer, like Elihu Burritt, was a blacksmith. ### INTERPRETATION:

1. Self-respect is such a regard for one's own worthiness, that one cannot be less than courageous, ambitious, nor less than as good as it is possible to be.

2. Self-respect is a sort of pride; but it differs from pride, which simply compares itself with others, and looks down upon them. The proud man does not care what others think of him.

3. Self-respect is a proper pride, that makes no comparisons with others. It is ashamed to do anything unworthy or dishonorable. The person who does not respect himself cannot expect others to respect him.

5. Self-respect is the foundation of the virtues heretofore considered, for it inspires one to carry himself well in every situation. It prevents ignominiously collapsing in the presence of difficulties.

6. Vanity finds its sole delight in the good opinion of others; Self-respect is, in a degree, independent of the good opinion of others. Its standdard is not what others think, but what one himself thinks of himself, and it will never stoop to do anything mean or dishonorable. It helps us in overcoming the bad conditions of envy and jealousy. It helps us to put away uncleanliness of person and impurity of mind.

7. Without Self-respect one is a first real way.

7. Without Self-respect one is of no value. It is the enemy of all vices and the encourager of all virtues, as it is the heart and soul of manli-

The man who is not true to himself, who cannot carry out the scaled orders placed in his hands at birth, regardless of the world's approval, or disapproval; the man who has not the courage to trace the pattern of his destiny, which no other soul but his own knows, can never rise to the true dignity of manhood, or attain success.

8. The advancement of the State depends upon the faithful carrying out of the scaled orders given to everyone as he starts out in life. There are occasions when the safety, and even the very existence of the State, is contingent upon the trustworthiness of the holders of these commissions. No one but the holder knows their contents; but be sure that the Great Ruler will in the future demand how that trust was kept.

APPLICATION:

Emerson, in his ideals of the Soul's life in God, his independent self-trust, placing himself indomitably on his instincts, and abiding thus, has done more than almost any other man for intellectual independence. Paul Tulane and Evans accomplished great things through the force of their own uprightness. Horace Greeley through life endured every hardship with calmness and the courage of a Spartan. Rufus Choate was of unsullied heart and purpose, and was dominated by his ideal of what was due those whose cause he advocated. The leading trait which characterizes Lowell's writings is moral nobility, both of mind and character. President Garfield expresses the substance of this virtue in his famous sentence: "There is one man whose respect I must have, and that is the respect of James A. Garfield." See J. G. Blaine under "Notable Sayings," page 225. The active life of James A. Garfield began on the towpath and ended in the White House Channing was a man of small stature, but he had a great presence, and a mighty soul. He was a man who always was, and always would be, inflexibly true to his highest convictions. See "Notable Sayings," page 232.

Robert E. Lee,	III. 165
Ralph Waldo Emerson,	III. 416*
William Cullen Bryant,	IV. 80
Thomas J. Jackson,	IV. 125
William McKinley,	XI. 1

INTERPRETATION:

1. To maintain one's self-respect necessitates neatness and cleanliness of person, and this goes far toward winning the respect of others.

2. The New Testament insists on personal purity as the beginning of all training and all knowledge. "The wisdom from above is first pure." Three hundred years ago a number of men and women in England earned themselves the name of Puritans, because they kept themselves pure and temperate. A handful settled at Plymouth: and even though but a handful the pure and temperate. A handful settled at Plymouth; and even though but a handful, the moral force of their purity has impressed itself upon the groundwork of the nation, and is the promise of its future.

Nikola Tesla says, "everyone should consider his body as a priceless gift from one whom he loves above all; a marvelous work of art, of indescribable beauty and mastery beyond human concep-tion, and so delicate that a word, a breath, a look,—nay, a thought, may injure it."

"I believe in the sacredness of the human body, this transient dwelling place of a living soul; and so I deem it the duty of every man and woman to keep his or her body beautiful through right thinking, and right living," says Jeremy Taylor.

3. Purity is to the mind and heart, what cleanliness is to the body. Self-respect, the soul's health, and our associations demand it. Our parents have told us, that of some matters we may speak only to them; of some other matters we should not speak at all.

4. Impure thoughts are far worse than unclean hands. How ashamed one would be if his thoughts were suddenly exposed to the world! And yet, in a certain degree, impure thoughts are always revealed in the face, and those who have insight and experience can immediately see all the loathsomeness of such a mind.

5. The rugged virtue of the Puritan Fathers has cemented the foundations of this Republic. The demand of the Commonwealth today is, a return to the morality and simple life of our early days. Purity is the imperative requirement for the per-manency of the State, and is the first step in the progress of citizenship.

Andrew Jackson,	V. 289
Richard H. Dana, Jr.,	VII. 182
Gail Hamilton,	IX. 227
William A. Buckingham,	X. 340

INTERPRETATION:

1. Almost the first thing to be learned in life is Self-control. Self-control is having one's faculties, and especially one's inclinations and emotions under the control of the will. It is, perhaps, most important to control one's temper, for that bears so directly upon the happiness of those about us. One should learn to control his tongue, for words once said are hard to unsay. It is well to get the habit of deliberation in speech, which gives one time to think and get control of one's tongue. Self-control is largely a matter of the will, and only serious determination is needed to acquire it.

2. Self-control which enables one to put by per-sonal gain and honor, when it is offered under the guise of "public service," and to make oneself of no account for the good of others, has no better example than the life of Washington.

3. There is nothing finer in the world than the kingship of self-control. William George Jordan "Man has two creators - his God, and himsays, "Man has two creators — his God, and him-self. His Creator furnishes him with the raw material, but it is what a man makes of himself that counts."

- 4. One can attain Self-control in great things, only through Self-control in little things. Strength of character consists of two things - power of will, and power of self-restraint. One of the very best methods of strengthening will-power, thereby gaining Self-control, is by compelling oneself to do instantly the thing we shrink from.—as jumping out of bed the moment one awakes, or taking a cold shower bath.
- 5. If one wants to be well, he must control his eating. Eating too much, is Gluttony, and drinking too much of what is intoxicating, is Intemperance. Intemperance is one of the most loathsome and contemptible habits one can fall into; and it is due entirely to the lack of Self-control. And the worst of the habit is it destroys what little Self-control may have existed, and one gradually reaches a point where he has no mastery chatever of himself. A drunkard's thirst is stronger than love of parents, wife or children; stronger than love of respectability, or dread of poverty and want.
- 6. There is only one sufe course for those who wish to grow into successful and happy manhood, and that is to touch nothing that will intoxicate. It should be shunned as a contagious disease.
- 7. So as regards the use of tobacco. If a boy wants to grow up with all his faculties unimpaired, he must let tobacco alone. Life is of vastly more consequence than athletics; and yet when a boy goes into athletics, his trainer says, "Cut out cigarettes, if you want to make the team."

Life enjoins the same rule, if one would " make " a fine character.

President George W. Wingate, president of the Public Schools Athletic League, issued a circular, which was posted in the class rooms of every public school in New York, telling them what they must do to become athletes. "You cannot expect success in life, however well you may be expect success in life, however well you may be the state of the state of the state of the state." educated, unless you have a sound body. Above all, you must not smoke cigarettes. It stunts your development, injures your heart and spoils your 'wind.'"

8. Even a dog can be trained to sit up with a piece of meat on his nose, and make no motion to eat it until the word is given. How much more should we obtain the same mastery over our-selves! And without such a mastery one is at the mercy of everything. The secret of success is to know how to deny oneself. Get the whip hand over yourself; that is the best educator. There are times when one's only duty is to keep from talking.

9. The State demands for its intellectual growth that everyone shall keep all his faculties in their highest state of efficiency. The inexorable wheels of progress will always crush the incompetent, who weaken their powers by dissipation.

APPLICATION:

Beecher's Self-control and self-poise was potent in turning public sentiment against slavery. Seward was not drawn, by the clamor of the people, from his sense of justice and right. Joseph Warren declined the command at Bunker Hill, but shouldered a musket and fought as a common soldier. Dana was a co-worker with Sumner, Howe, and Adams. Gail Hamilton was a wonderful teacher and lecturer. John B. Gough has be-come famous for the self-control displayed fighting his temptation until he entirely mastered his appetite. Edgar A. Poe could not resist the temptation to drink, which destroyed a career that might have made his name the brightest in American literature. The life of Washington offers many incidents to illustrate this principle. The winter at Valley Forge, the great cabal, the failure of Congress to support the army, the treachery of Arnold, brought up unusual conditions calling for Self-control.

INTERPRETATION:

- 1. Self-reliance is the result of self-control, but it must not be confounded with egotism or selfsonceit, which is merely being satisfied with oneself.
- 2. Self-reliance makes no comparisons, it simply says, "I will try." Emerson says, Self-trust is the essence of heroism.
- 3. One of the best means of increasing Self-reliance is, never to accept help in any problem or situation until one has fairly tried what can be done without it. Always make the attempt with all your might to conquer the difficulty, and the satisfaction of having accomplished it all by your own effort is always a sufficient reward.

own effort is always a sufficient reward.

And the best of it is, that a successful accomplishment brings an increase of confidence and Self-reliance. It is wonderful what power there is in Self-reliance to marshal all the faculties, and unite their strength.

- 4. Self-reliance is fully as important in thought as in action. To be running to one's friends for advice is never to learn anything, for others cannot put themselves in your place. Therefore, your own thought of what you have to do is usually better than the advice of others. The worst vice is Advice.
- 5. American biography is rich in the number of great men who have begun life in poverty and toil. One would be astonished at the number. One reason is, that having so few helps they were forced to rel upon them a, and by this means made places for themselves. They learned to trust themselves, and became emboldened to push forward with promptness, energy and common wense, which at length compelled others to trust and honor them.
- 6. It does not require such conditions of hardship to make success; but with greater helps we are apt to lose sight of the means which lack of help forced them to employ, and which, if we would employ with the same energy, would bring us the same success.
- 7. Contrast the two boys, "I can't" and "I can;" the one who leans, and the one who stands; the one who follows, and the one who leads and originates. The first step to failure is the first doubt of yourself.

8. The pillars of the State are built of those who practice Self-reliance. Such a State will always stand, for it is builded upon a rock.

APPLICATION:

Edward Everett said of Jefferson, "to have given the impress and peculiarity of his own mind to a charter of public rights, beyond anything human ever borne on parchment—this is the glory of Thomas Jefferson." C. P. Huntington abandoned a farm to peddle clocks. He was a born trader, and being delayed in crossing the Isthmus of Panama, he traded so profitably as to double his capital. Choate draws his inspiration from his distinguished relative, Rufus Choate, and like him is saturated with the highest ideals of life and character. Horatio Allen ran the first locomotive in America. Smyth was an inventor, who was obliged to peddle lithographs to obtain money to secure his first patent. John A. Dix had a wonderfully clear comprehension of affairs, which made him a most valued authority and adviser in times of public confusion and peril. George M. Pullman at seventeen braved the peril of youth and inexperience, and undertook a contract for elevating the buildings along the Erie Canal.

INTERPRETATION:

- 1. The traits of character thus far considered might be called, the duties one onces to oneself. But we live in a world full of other people, with interests and rights. The seeking to fulfill our desires, without regard to the rights and interests of others, is Selfishness. One might say that this is the great crying evil of the world, for from it spring all the crime and weakness, which fill the world with unhappiness.
- 2. The Selfish man wants money; he does not care that other people need money; he wants it, and to get it he robs and commits murder.
- 3. It is Selfishness which makes men stingy and mean, until they neglect those who are dependent upon them. It is Selfish love of ease and personal gratification, that makes one eccentric and disagreeable at home, and speak harsh and cruel words to one's family and associates. Selfishness seeks to get the utmost amount of good out of the world, with the least possible return.
- 4. The three necessary helps to Unselfishness are,—a sense of justice, to know what is right toward others; a quick sympathy to feel what would help or harm them; and, above all, good will to exercise justice and sympathy.

  5. The aim of an Unselfish person is to think.
- 5. The aim of an Unselfish person is to think, feel, speak and act as one would wish others to do to him. The Unselfish life is the loving life.
- 6. Courage calls for a stout heart; but Unself-ishness calls for a large heart. But there is a great distinction between thinking about oneself, which is necessary to self-development, and what is ordinarily meant by Selfishness.
- 7. We must devote careful and painstaking thought to ourselves, to our conduct, to our attitude toward others; but it must be thought, that includes the other's welfare, and considers their rights and interests,— in a word, that holds them in affection.

INTERPRETATION:

- 1. One of the most important virtues, and one which helps us most in our relations to those about us, is Obedience. A man owes much to the claims of society, and yielding to them is Obedience. So far as a man neglects these duties, and lives merely for his own pleasure, he injures his own best life.
- 2. Children sometimes think that it is manly to defy the rules of the home, or the school. On the contrary, it is Obedience that is manly, and disobedience that is childish. The baby knows nothing of rules, and must be kept by force from putting its hands into the fire; but gradually it is trained to Obey rules; and we must all Obey rules, to the ends of our lives.
- 3. The first lesson to be learned by the child is Obedience. It must learn to Obey its wiser protectors implicitly and without question. This underlies all other lessons.
- 4. When one has learned to Obey, one easily learns many other things. Not only must children Obey, but everybody must Obey. The pupil Obeys the teacher; but the teacher also Obeys rules, which the child knows nothing of. He Obeys the rules for conducting a school properly and teaching properly. Everybody has to Obey the demands which circumstances put upon him. Thus it is manly to Obey the demands laid upon us, and childish to disobey.
- 5. Grown-up people are obliged to Obey more strictly than children, for there are duties, obligations and responsibilities in life which cannot be disobeyed without loss of position, property and even life.
- 6. Obedience in human life, is what law is in the natural world. It is Obedience to law that holds the planets in their courses, that brings the rain and the sunshine, and makes the difference between civilized society and the unlettered savage. There can be no order without Obedience.
  - 7. There are three kinds of Obedience:
    - Obedience to superiors, which is the soldier's duty.
    - 2. Obedience to the call of men's needs.

When war broke out with Spain, it was necessary to deliver immediately a message to Garcia, the insurgent leader, who was somewhere in the mountains of Cuba, no one knew where. A man named Rowan was ordered to deliver that message. It took three weeks of the most incredible difficulty hardship, and danger, but he delivered it. The deed has become historic. But in almost every life there is a Message to be delivered to Garcia; and the point for everyone to seriously determine is, Will Garcia get that message? See Elbert Hubbard, under "Notable Sayings," page 252.

3. Obedience to a sense of duty, which is consecration to duty.

8. There is no other duty of such vital importance as Obedience. The first duty of the State is to obey one's parents; the second duty is to obey the rules of the school.

APPLICATION:

Paul Revere's ride, in carrying out his instructions from Gen. Warren, has become a classic. # INTERPRETATION:

1. Sympathy and love may be considered as different aspects of the same thing. There may be Sympathy without love, and love that has not much Sympathy. We may sympathize with the grief of a stranger; but it is hardly possible to love, without having Sympathy. It is possible, however, for one to be selfish enough to cause pain to another whom we love, without being aware of it.

2. Disobedience is a lack of Sympathy. Sympathy rather implies a certain thoughtfulness at its root. A Sympathetic person thinks of others, and puts himself in their places, and considers what will please, and what will not. There is nothing more cruel than love which is thought-less about offending its object. In its derivation Sympathy means, suffering with.

3. Sympathy is something more than pity. It has no condescension about it. It feels another's sorrow as though it were his own. We cannot live without the companionship of others. It is affection and interest that gives the charm of living; and one of the greatest blessings we can bestow upon our friends is thoughtful Sympathy and love; and these may take the hardness out of duty and obedience, for one wishes to please those we love.

4. Write your name with sympathy, kindness and mercy on the hearts of those with whom you associate, and you will never be forgotten. A Cooper, a Peabody, an Armstrong, a Brace, a Riis, needs no monument to commemorate his name.

5. The ideal American citizen lends a helping hand to all in need. The Republic would indeed be poor were there not Sympathetic hearts and open hands in every community. The generous response to the need of the sufferers from the San Francisco earthquake must compel a large optimism towards universal brotherhood.

INTERPRETATION:

1. When sympathy is awakened and fostered, it quickly realizes that the great world is full of helplessness, ignorance, suffering, and crime; and to the heart comes a call to do something toward its amelioration. The awakened sense of duty may develop in many directions, but the inspiration takes root in the very fibre of his soul; and if that soul has had woven into it the threads of true living, it perceives that this service is necessary for its own growth and perfection. Emerson says, "Serving others is serving ourselves."

2. The avenues for service are without number. and the particular direction taken depends upon unseen, and often unrecognized, influences, upon the force of which, and the quality and strength of mind of the individual, depend the fullness of the result achieved.

3. It is this inspiration that is at the root of our charities, hospitals and asylums It has made the philanthropists and reformers of the world; and it is the one great hone and encouragement for the upward growth of Humanity.

4. It is Consecration to Duty that corrects the delirium of the animal spirits; it makes us consider life, and engage in new aims and powers, that turn an irresistible upward force into our thought, destroying individualism. Without irreverence it feels itself necessary to God's work, believing that "He could not make Antonio Stradivari's violins without Antonio."

5. A characteristic of this trait is persistency, which leads one through mire and hardship to the realization of our dream. The unremitting attention to high sentiments in obscure duties is the beginning of this virtue, and its exercise leads to the temper which will dare the tumult, or the scaffold. This devotion to one's ideals, with a love that will be annihilated sooner than be traitorous to its belief, meets unmoved the severest trials, and faces death without a tremor, for it has already made death impossible.

6. No obstacle, however insurmountable it may seem to the timid or faint-hearted, can bar the way of any youth possessed with enthusiasm for high ideals. Phillips Brooks says, "The whole sum of life is service — service to others, and not to self. No man has come to his greatness, who has not felt in some degree that his life belongs to his race." Mary Lyon, founder of Mt. Holyoke Seminary, used to say, "Go where duty calls. Take hold where no one else will."

7. The Nation owes all homage, and will never cease to delight to honor, those high-bred souls who sacrifice self to duty; and it lays the injunction tion upon all strong souls - "Go thou, and do likewise."

APPLICATION:

It is said of Miss Willard that nothing could distract her from her work. Adoniram Judson was imprisoned and nearly starved, but nothing could weaken his devotion to his missionary labors. John Brown of Ossawattomie devoted his life to freeing the slaves. See Wendell Phillips, "Notable Sayings," page 263. Lucretia Mott was one of the first women to advocate the anti-slavery cause. Gallaudet devoted his life to teaching the blind. Wendell Phillips abandoned the promise of a great career to devote himself wholly to humanity. Mrs. Stanton may be considered the originator of the movement for Woman's Suffrage, to which she devoted her life work.

William C. Bond,	VIII. 381
Amos E. Dolbear,	IX. 414
Joseph Francis,	X. 88
Lee de Forest,	XIII. 98

INTERPRETATION:

1. Everyone in the world is bound to the world of men and women, outwardly by Obedience, and inwardly by Love and Sympathy; and growing out of this is another relation fully as important, which is Usefulness.

2. The first demand of Usefulness is, to do one's work in the world, whatever it is, in the best manner possible; otherwise the great work of society and of the world cannot go on. Everyone has his part; each is as necessary as a cogwheel in machinery.

3. Usefulness contributes to happiness, by giving inspiration, and, therefore, attractiveness to necessary duties, which otherwise would be repugnant and difficult; and recreation finds its highest benefit in its contrast with the task of Usefulness. We should be sure that our sympathy helps others to self-help, otherwise we harm those we would help; and he sure that we give oursclves, otherwise we become stingy and sentimentalists. People do not need alms, they need a friend.

4. Usefulness requires of us to make the most 4. Usefulness requires of us to make the most of ourselves, which necessitates education. Books are embalmed minds. The great interrogation point of this country is, "What can you do?" Knowledge must be converted into faculty. A college course is not an education; it is only the beginning of an education. The college is primarily a discipline, a mental gymnasium. Other things being equal, a college man, as a business things being equal, a college man, as a business man, will outmatch one who has not received that mental training.

5. The size of yourself, and the thoroughness and genuineness of yourself, will determine your orbit. Men talk about fortunes and friends and other aids to success; but it is the man himself who succeeds. Launch a star and it will find the orbit of a star: but it must be a star, and not a puff ball. It will make an orbit of its own, which will determine its relation to all other stars, and the field of its own eternal movement. Conscious Usefulness is the foundation of true happiness.

6. The material welfare of the nation depends upon the capacity for Usefulness of its individ-uals; and to the genius of their mechanical and industrial skill it owes its strength and position among the nations of the world. Every invention is a contribution to the State.

APPLICATION:

Andrew D. White placed over the entrance to Cornell University this sentence: — "So enter, that daily thou mayst become more learned and thoughtful; so depart, that daily thou mayst bethoughtful; so depart, that daily thou mayst become more useful to thy country and mankind. William McKinley said, "If you will just learn how to do one useful thing better than anybody else, you will never be out of a job." This simple statement sums up Franklin's greatness, "He thought more, said more, worked more, and did more that was of enduring value, than any man yet born of woman under the skies of free America." See woman under the skies of free America." See Benjamin Franklin under "Notable Sayings," page 243. Dr. Morton's name is inscribed in the Boston State House as one of the most illustrious men of Massachusetts. William C. Bond, when only fifteen years old, constructed a chronometer from a description in a book. A. E. Dolbear is the first inventor of Wireless Telegraphy. Cornelius K. Garrison,	VII. 262
Henry C. Frick,	X. 263
George Eastman,	XIII. 132
Luther Burbank,	XI. 374

INTERPRETATION:

1. Industry is not only a duty, but it is an essential aid in accomplishing other duties. It is helpful to right living, and, by keeping the faculties employed, permits no time for wrong living and temptation.

2. Idleness is the great breeder of carelessness, impurity of thought and crime.

3. Regular occupation is necessary to life, and it is one of the greatest blessings of our lives. Industry is helpful to self-command, because body and mind are disciplined by it into orderliness, and life is made regular by it, as a body of trained troops is more easily controlled than an undisciplined mob.

4. It is one of the best helps for contentment, for it affords a regular vent for the activity of life, which would otherwise tend to wear out life itself. Idleness soon becomes a burden to one's life.

5. Industry is essential to the highest influence; and it is very necessary that the young should be provided with interests in study and philanthropic activity, to give opportunity of increasing their influence.

6. Life's master word is, Work. With this magic word in one's heart, all things are possible. It is the touchstone of progress, and the key to

6. Life's master word is, Work. With this magic word in one's heart, all things are possible. It is the touchstone of progress, and the key to success. Generally speaking, the life of all truly great men has been a life of intense and incessant labor.

7. It is not necessary for a man to be actively bad in order to make a failure of life; simple inaction will accomplish it. Nature has everywhere written her protest against idleness; everything which ceases to struggle, which remains inactive, rapidly deteriorates. It is the struggle toward an ideal, the constant effort to get higher and further, which develops manhood and character.

8. In proportion to the Industry of the people does the State thrive. Life and action are the food which support its efficiency and helpfulness.

APPLICATION:

Luther Burbank is called the "Wizard of Horticulture," and is an amazing worker. Horace Mann and Louis Agassiz accomplished their great work only by a lifetime of incessant labor. C. K. Garrison was a man of extraordinary energy and industry. Bowditch's translation of Laplace's "Celestial Mechanics" was a work of gigantic proportions, which involved incredible labor.

John Eliot,	II. 422
Rutherford B. Hayes,	III. 198*
Thomas J. Jackson,	IV. 125
Sir William Johnson.	V. 110

INTERPRETATION:

1. Truth is reality. Truthfulness is the one great fact in human conduct. Society is like a building, which stands firm, if it has a strong foundation. The house that is not builded upon trust-worthy foundations is unsafe, and is of no use in the world.

2. Society exists because men trust one another; so that a dishonest man should have no place in civilized society. He belongs to the barbarous times, before men had learned the worth and importance of trustworthiness. A dishonest man should be considered an enemy to mankind, who is making war upon civilization and the upward progress of man.

3. There are various means of dishonesty that do not come within the reach of the law. This kind of deception is even worse than illegal actions, for a man uses the law which is meant to protect society, as a cover from which he can attack society.

4. Lying is a common form of dishonesty. A lie is told either to get some advantage to which one has no valid claim, and is in reality cheating; or is to defend oneself from the bad consequences of action already done, which is also cheating - cheating justice.

5. Boys think it cowardly to go back on one's friend; but it is a thousand times worse to go back on oneself. It is better to take the consequences, whatever they may be, and resolve not to repeat the fault. It is the meanest kind of untruthfulness, to let another bear blame, or suffer in the smallest way for something that we, ourselves, have done; and it leaves wounds upon ourselves, which are the most difficult to heal up. If we would stop before speaking an untruth, and call it by its right name, "That would be a lie, and if I say it, I shall be a liar," fewer falsehoods would be uttered.

6. The State is built upon the foundation of Truthfulness and Honesty," and its urgent demand upon every youth is that he shall seriously have the fulfill. lay this duty upon himself, for upon the fulfillment of this duty rests the future of the Republic. It is the second step in the practice of citizenship.

APPLICATION:

Theodore Parker has been called the "Elijah" of liberal religion, because of his uncompromising denunciation of falsehood. Thomas Jefferson said, "There is not upon earth a more perfectly honest man than John Adams." Sir William Johnson and William Penn had the entire confidence of the Indians, from their absolute truthfulness. John Eliot is called the "Apostle of the Indians." Abraham Lincoln was called "Honest Abe," because the very framework of his mental and moral being was honesty.

Gen. W. S. Hancock,	IV. 134
John Lothrop Motley,	V. 213

INTERPRETATION:

1. Civility may mean simply, not rude. Politeness means graceful manners, and it is deeper than civility. Courtesy means not only politeness, but sincere kindness and attention. It goes beneath the surface to the spirit prompting the word and

2. Courtesy implies a recognition of the other person's dignity. It is treating another, as though that other was truly his ideal self.

3. Courtesy is perhaps more important in the family than anywhere else, because in this relation people are thrown most closely together, and need the protection of Courtesy, which is the best means of avoiding unpleasant friction and unhappiness.

4. True Courtesy is not something artificial; it is the expression of thoughtfulness for others.

5. Rudeness and boorishness sometimes spring from ignorance, but are more often the expression of selfishness, which forgets the feelings and tastes of others.

6. Good manners have their roots in right feeling, and the passoort to good society is fine man-nors. The Aladdin's lamp of success in business is Courtesy. It costs nothing, and buys everything.

7. The measure of the refinement of a nation is shown by the manners of its people; and the State has a right to expect that everybody will maintain the dignity of its position.

APPLICATION:

Emerson says, "A beautiful behavior in a woman is better than a beautiful form." Gen. Hancock was the idol of the army. See D. Dougherty, under "Notable Sayings," page 240. Curtis was the ideal of a fine mannered gentleman. Motley made the famous bon mot, "I can spare the necessities of life, but not the luxuries." Rosco Conkling courteously executed a colored constant. Conkling courteously escorted a colored senstor to be introduced to the vice-president, when his colleague, whose duty it was to make this introduction, neglected to perform it. Edward R. Sill,	VII. 240
Thomas G. Appleton,	VIII. 391
Frederick W. Gunn,	XIII. 349

INTERPRETATION:

1. While we should be courteous to all, we cannot have the same feeling and liking for all; and intimacies are formed with those who are especially congenial and companionable to us. This is called Friendship.

True friendship is based upon liking, in which similarity in tastes and interests makes pleasant company; but there must be respect and admiration added to this liking. We want for our friend, one who is honest and brave, one in whose honor and kindness we can trust.

3. Friendship involves certain duties. it that you deserve the liking and respect of your friend. "Who wrongs another clouds his own Sun." We must be loyal and stand up for him against evil report. You should look out for his interests, and look out for him in every proper way. A true friend will rejoice in our success, and will sorrow over our defeats, as though they were his own.

4. True friendship aims to be of service, and assists in every honorable way; but one must not say or do for him what will dishonor oneself. It was once said of a prominent businessman, the highest form of praise, that he would not do a dishonorable thing even to oblige a friend,

Mrs. Browning asked Charles Kingsley, "What is the secret of your life? Tell me, that I may make mine beautiful, too." He replied, "I had a friend."

Emerson says, "A friend is the hope of the heart."

5. The policy of the Republic is to be friendly with the entire world, and it asks that ties of Friendship be woven between the individuals of every nation.

APPLICATION:

Dr. O. W. Holmes was essentially a personal friend to all who knew him well, a helper to all who wished his aid; and in spoken friendship and active service he was the essence of comradeship. The keynote of personal friendship underlies very many of his poems. His idea of comradeship involves necessity for cheerfulness. This so overflowed his life and writings, that he has become the exponent of helpful congeniality. Mark Twain's geniality makes him the honored guest at every literary gathering. E. R. Sill took his pupils to his heart. J. G. Holland was the friend of all young writers.

XX. AMIABILITY: Gentleness.

EXAMPLES:

Oliver Wendell Holmes,	II. 236
George William Curtis,	II. 96*
Fitz-Greene Halleck,	III. 226
Samuel L. Clemens,	V1. 25
William Cullen Bryant,	IV. 80
Edward Everett,	VI. 179°
William McKinley,	XI. 1*

INTERPRETATION:

1. Amiability is the crown of character, for it makes visible the royalty of its possessor, and leads all to do him reverence.

2. Amiability is more than mere sweetness of temper; it is thoughtfulness of other's comfort and pleasure; it is the unconscious desire to give happiness — born of happiness.

3. It is not enough to have moods of geniality one must have the habit of "love ways," and must give constant expression to the feeling. We need more than the simple knowledge that we are beloved; we need to have it spoken, and repeated again and again.

4. The habit of amiability is encouraged by trying not to see the annoying circumstances about us, and by putting away the irritations at the moment of their appearance.

5. Amiability leads to cheerfulness, which is life's master-key that unlocks all hearts. Sunnyhearted, bright-faced people attract sunny conditions. The human heart, like plants and flowers, turns instinctively to the sun, and will seek you, if you are sunny and cheerful. Everyone wants a part of your joy.

6. The best furnishings of a house are happy faces; the best seasoning of daily bread is a smile; the best music to soothe weariness is laughter.

7. Look for beauty in all you see, and embody beauty in all you do, and it will add much to sweetness of disposition. Read a beautiful poem every morning and it will tune your mind to serenity and cheerfulness and happiness, and will prevent it from being disturbed or ruffled by petty annoyances, or the discontent of commonplace surroundings.

8. There are some persons who continually lose their temper at trifles. They seem to think that their rights or their feelings are being trespassed upon. This form of anger is selfishness. It is a form of self-conceit, which keeps oneself too prominent in one's mind; but it really shows that such persons have less consideration for others than themselves. One may be justified in becoming angry at wrongs, injustice or injuries done to others, but it is a fault, when one gets angry too easily. One must learn to forget, even when one has really been injured. We must learn to realize, that it is a far less injury than we thought it at first. With quick-tempered people, giving way to anger only increases the fault.

9. The best way to control anger is to stop short and think it over, when the ridiculousness of the present passion will be realized. One of Jefferson's Rules of Conduct is, "when angry, count ten; when very angry, count one hundred." (See Jefferson's biography, Vol. III, page 5.)

10. Calm and dispassionate criticism is beneficial to the best growth of every one; but passion, which is unbridled anger, leads to excess in speech and action, which always defeats the measures it advocates.

APPLICATION:

Edward Everett had the exquisite grace seldom found except in a woman of rare culture. About him was a magical atmosphere which every one felt, but could not describe. William Penn won the Indians by his gentleness. Halleck's epitaph reads, "None knew him but to love him." Nathaniel Bowditch, Vol. VI, page 374, added to his fame as a mathematician by his Rule of Life. expressed in the following quotation: - "Whenever she came into my presence I tried to express outwardly, something of the pleasure it always gave me.

Henry Clay,	V. 77*
Charles Carroll,	VII. 441
Robert G. Shaw,	VIII. 143
Barbara Frietchie.	X. 113

INTERPRETATION:

1. The word Patriotism comes from the Greek root, meaning coming from our forefathers. Our Patriotism grows out of our sense of gratitude to the founders and preservers of the nation for what they have done for us. From this naturally springs the desire to perpetuate the results and benefits of their labors

2. There has probably never been a country for which so much hardship and suffering have been endured in bringing about the present condition of liberty, culture, and personal welfare. Think of the thousands who have toiled, suffered, and died for it! We have a country we can love, because there have been patriots who loved their country better than they loved themselves. No nation has had such splendid heroes, and they are more in number than we can name.

3. The young people cannot realize the heroism shown in the Civil War which put an end to slavery, and preserved the union of our states. Mothers sent their sons to the war, young men gave up the dearest things in life; and both sides, South as well as North, made awful sacrifices for love of country. Memorial Day has been set aside, to keep always green in our memory the sacrifices made for love of country.

4. But Patriotism is more than merely loving one's country, and being proud of it. It is being willing to do something for it. The safety of our country is not in law or legislation, but in men and women who serve the commonwealth.

5. Patriotism is doing constantly the duties devolving upon us, to preserve the heritage bequeathed to us. We owe it to the state to be good citizens, to study its welfare, to vote intelligently for its test interests. There are some men who are so lacking in Patriotism that they make use of politics to enrich themselves out of the public money. They buy and sell votes. They stir up party animosity and class prejudice simply to advance their own selfish interests. All the private virtues, honesty and industry are helps toward bettering the country; and every man and woman serves his or her country, who strives to make men better in the every-day walk of life.

6. The Patriotism we need is that which shows itself in daily fidelity to private duty and public

7. The welfare of the State should be a sufficient reason and incentive for the practice of every virtue, for the end of Character is the benefiting of one's fellowmen. The State has a right to demand that we subordinate all actions to her interests, and that we perfect our character, that we may add to her usefulness.

APPLICATION:

There is one whose name by common consent stands for honor, courage, wisdom and patriotism; and that is George Washington. he is so greatly honored by all nations and peoples is this: At the end of the Revolutionary War he was at the head of a victorious army, and the object of enthusiastic love of the whole people. He was urged to make himself a king or emperor; but unlike Napoleon Bonaparte, in France under similar conditions, he refused a crown, because he neas true to the principles of liberty for which he fought. He would not sacrifice the position won. tought. He would not sacrifice the position won, to his personal gain or gratification. It was a marvel to the civilized world, when he quietly laid down all this power; it had never seen such an exhibition of derotion to principle and honor and truth. He twice allowed himself to be chosen president, and then he became a private citizen. See Rufus Choate, under "Notable Sayings," page 233, and also Henry Lee, page 257.

233, and also Henry Lee, page 257.

To appreciate Lincoln's real greatness as a patriot, his life must be looked at from its crude beginning, not in its sublime ending. He began as a country politician who was ambitious for personal advancement; yet again and again, first in small matters, and then in great ones, he consistently put principle first, and self second. Something of the early crudeness was visible in his external appearance always; but within, he became ever more gentle, pure, tender, and heroic to the end. Becoming president only enabled him to show on a large scale the traits by which his whole life had been governed. One of the best interpretations of Lincoln's character is in Lowell's Commemoration Ode, stanza 6, which is universally accepted as the finest illustration of Lincoln in literature. See Gettysburg Address, "Notable Sayings," page 257. Samuel Adams is called the "father of the American Revolution."

George Bancroft said of Henry Clay, "that which will commend him most to posterity is his love of the Union, his patriotism, his love of country." See Henry Clay and Daniel Webster, "Notable Sayings," pages 234 and 267. Daniel Webster was a devoted supporter of the Union, even though some of his actions offended the Abolitionists. Robert G. Shaw was selected for the subject, which should typify patriotic devotion. Horace Porter said, "It is a priceless blessing to the Republic that the era of the Civil War dil not breed a Marius and a Sulla, a Cæsar and a Pompey, or a Charles I and a Cromwell, but that the power to which the destinies of the country were entrusted were wielded by a Lincoln and a Grant." See Fisher Ames in "Notable Sayings." page 222. The Declaration of Independence as first published was signed only with the name of John Hancock, which caused a price to be put upon his head.

XXII. KINDNESS TO ANIMALS: Our Other Friends.

EXAMPLES:

Henry Bergh,	III. 106
James J. Audubon,	VI. 75
George T. Angell,	VII. 477
Ernest Thompson-Seton,	IX. 56
William H. Beard,	XI. 294
William E. D. Scott,	XIII. 291

INTERPRETATION:

1. Not only should we be kind to human associates, but we should be kind to our animal friends, for they also have a place in our lives.

2. One reason is, that they are so much in our power. To take advantage of their weakness and our strength, is mean and belittling. We owe much to domestic animals. The horse, the ox. the cow give a life of service for us, and we owe it to them to care for them, and to treat them with kindness.

3. Many are unkind from thoughtlessness. They leave a horse uncovered in the cold, or use too short a check-rein, or use a check-rein with a heavy load, or on a long journey.

4. A good way to become sympathetic with animals is to observe and study them.

5. Not only should one himself be kind to animals, but he should take care to prevent others from being cruel to them.

6. It is a noble thing to interfere in behalf of abused animals, and the opportunity is too often presented.

7. A Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals would soon have no place in the Commonwealth, if the children would resolve that they will always obey the law of kindness to dumb animals.

APPLICATION:

Thompson-Seton advocates the going shooting with a camera only. G. T. Angell founded the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

LITERATURE:

Isaac T. Hopper,		330
Roger Sherman,	II.	352
David Dudley Field,	lV.	236
	VIII.	41
John Hay,	XI.	12

INTERPRETATION:

1. Truth is the summit of living; Justice is the application of it to affairs. Justice is a religious element, though based on moral grounds.

Justice may be defined, as that virtue which impels us to give every person what is his due. In this extended sense of the word, it comprehends the practice of every virtue which reason prescribes or society should expect. Our duty to our Maker, to each other, and to ourselves, is fully fulfilled if we give them what we owe them. Thus Justice, properly speaking, is the only virtue; and all the rest have their origin in it.

2. Justice is not absolutely inexorable; it tempers its severity with kindness, and aims at a medium course which brings about the greatest good. Like honesty, it is one of the foundation stones of society, public affairs and personal dealings. It requires a high order of mind, for it calls for thought, as against carelessness; sacrifice, as against selfishness; decision, as against vacillation.

3. Like truthfulness, Justice is one of the foundation stones of the State. The State demands of its youth the practice of Justice in every-day affairs, to fit them for the right use of citizenship.

APPLICATION:

Justice, with John Marshall, was not a matter of technical reasoning; he took a medium course. He neither believed in a strict, nor in a vague interpretation of the Constitution. He used common sense, and laid down the fundamental principles. The affectionate. human qualities of Marshall aided his strong intellect. One experience in Marshall's life illustrates his character. At Valley Forge when the Revolutionary Army was undergoing terrible sufferings, Marshall was full of cheer and encouragement. Even then his judicial ability, his fairness were so appreciated that he was chosen to settle differences. He also acted as deputy judge-advocate. At a convention called to discuss the new Constitution proposed for the United States, Marshall uttered these sentiments: "What are the favorite maxims of democracy? A strict observation of justice and public faith, and a steady adherence to virtue. These are the principles of good government. No mischief, no misfortune ought to deter us from the justice of public faith." Every step upward was marked by integrity and character. For thirty-four years he held the office of chief justice of the United States. What did it mean? It meant that he was required to explain and apply the new Constitution, which demanded someone who could interpret the Constitution in terms of broad justice and by the light of the highest scisdom. To make the Constitution work, to give it reason and power, to keep the states together, was the hardest problem. And here is where the world confesses John Marshall's great ability and uprightness. William Pinckney said of Marshall, "He was born to be the chief justice of any country in which he lived." James Bryce says, "Marshall was a second maker of the Constitution." Chief Justice Story said, "He stood without a rival in his sorupulous interrity and creative out a rival in his scrupulous integrity and exact-ness of interpretation."

Isaac T. Hopper, Quaker philanthropist, was the champion of the slave and befriended them. John Hay, as Secretary of State, has given the world new ideas of the meaning of justice, as applied to diplomacy. Marion had such a keen sense of justice that he refused to sanction the confisca-tion of the property of the Torie, at the concla-sion of the Revolutionary War. John Jay was the first Chief Justice of the United States. Col. Higginson could not deny to the black man the rights belonging to every man. Roger Sherman had "the quality of good sense so highly developed that it resembled genius."

INTERPRETATION:

1. Imagine the process of grinding a glass lens, —no change, hour after hour, the same move-ments, the same sleepy hum of the wheel, and not much to show at the cnd. The grinder grows tired, but keeps on. Imagine weaving the yarn into a piece of tapestry. That is still more slow and laborious an operation. Bit by bit the threads are put in, and only after a long time does the beautiful pattern begin to show. Withdoes the beautiful pattern begin to show. out infinite Patience, such work could not be done, and all the finest attainments would not be possible.

2. It is true, as Milton in his blindness said " They also serve who only stand and wait." But the best teachings of Patierce for the young will differ somewhat from that. Old age, bereavement, life's failures and disappointments call for a saintly Patience. But youth needs another sort — the Patience that orercomes adverse conditions. Cheerfully making the most of meagre opportunities: singing, instead of sighing, along toil-some ways; getting even a child's grip on the best things, and holding on, while slowly the worth of it all unfolds,— these are the ways of Patience for the young.
3. Job gives us the right starting-point. The conditions of poverty or dullness, of weakness of body or weakness of will, must not make us lose heart; they are simply handicaps, which require to be overcome, by Patience and perseverance.

4. Only with infinite Patience has the structure of the Commonwealth been erected to its present fair proportions; and it is only by the continued patient and persistent efforts of individuals, that advancement can be made to greater beauty and higher perfection.

APPLICATION:

Audubon exhibited Patience, and lavish generosity. On one occasion 200 original drawings were destroyed by mice, and the work had to be done over. Dr. Howe taught Laura Bridgman, a blind deaf-mute, to become an educator. He was called, "The Lafayette of Greece," and was the subject of Whittier's poem, "The Hero." Gen. Hood lost an arm, and later a leg, in the Civil War, but returned to the battlefield. Lydia M. Child said she would never work on a winning side. Chas. A. Spencer was not disheartened after losing by fire the accumulation of many years.

EXAMPLES:

George A. Custer,	IV. 274
John Wesley,	V. 57
Neal Dow,	V. 433
John Pierpont,	VI. 155
Clinton B. Fisk,	VI. 244

INTERPRETATION:

1. Observe that the word Temperance is used in more than one sense. Sometimes it means selfcontrol, especially in regard to eating and drinking. It is also used in the narrower sense in regard to intoxicating drinks; it sometimes means the habit of those who never take intoxicants to excess; it also means the habit of those who refrain wholly from any use of these drinks.

2. In general, Temperance is a kind of power to hold appetite at arm's length, as it were; to handle it, or put it wholly away according to one's will.

3. It is also an expression of freedom. temperate person is master of all his appetites. The intemperate person is ruled by his appetite, and thus becomes a slave. At each moment of a man's life he is either a king or a slave. As he surrenders to a wrong appetite, to any human weakness, to any failure, he is a slare. As he day by day crushes out human weakness he recreates a new self, from the sin and folly of the past — he is a king.

4. Experience shows that quicker than almost any other physical agency, alcohol breaks down a man's power of self-control; and this is a moral injury a thousand times worse than the physical evils, great as they are. Manhood is lost, and the drunken man surrenders the reins of his nature to a fool, or a fiend. Lyman Beecher was once asked why he was a total abstainer. He replied, "I thought I had better use my head." The young man who means to do the best possible work his body and mind can do, must keep his body and mind as pure, as Beecher kept his brain.

5. The welfare of the State demands that everyone shall practice Temperance, as the root and groundwork of an orderly life; — Temperance in all things, not only in personal habits, but in thought and action.

APPLICATION:

Neal Dow was an ardent advocate of the habit of temperance for over seventy years. What converted him to total abstinence was the mischief wrought by wine and whiskey, and his sympathy for the multitudes of suffering people. "What can I do to help these miserable people? Shall I advise them to be moderate?" That did "Let us trv a new plan, and not drink This actually worked, and out of this resolve to be a total abstainer grew the character of his life.

Gen. Custer promised a sister that he would give up drinking, and he kept his piedge. Lyman Beecher was one of the first advocates of Temperance. William E. Dodge was president of the National Temperance Society.

INTERPRETATION:

1. While we seek the companionship of friends, there is a companionship with our thoughts, which is closer and more important than that with people or with books. Unless our thoughts are pure and wise and well-meaning, they work more harm than any other companionship. The mind is always painting pictures in imagination of what we have read, or have fancied, or hope to see and do; and the more we become interested in these mental pictures, the more we turn to them, and the more distinct they become.

2. These pictures show exactly what the tastes of the owner are, and, indeed, what manner of man he is. If we could look into this picture gallery in another's mind, we could prophesy something of what the man is.

3. Pure and noble imaginings become a power for good. A healthy imagination is a well-spring of pure pleasure, and by reading and keeping our eyes open to the world, we store our minds with pictures, which will in after life bring great satisfaction.

4. We should train our minds also to create pictures in Imagination, scenes of fancy, beautiful thoughts. Literary composition is one of the best means of enriching our minds with mental pictures. It is through Imagination, that inventions are thought out, discoveries made, music composed, paintings created and business en-larged. The faculty of the Imagination is the great spring of human activity, and the principal source of human development.

5. We should train our Imagination to reproduce what we see. To be able to draw, greatly helps to the reproducing in the Imagination the beautiful things we have enjoyed. There is a vast difference between creative Imagination, and that which simply forms pictures from memory. great artist must create his picture out of the richness and luxuriance of his Imagination, and this is accomplished by first enriching his soul by study and experience.

6. The ideals of greatness in a Commonwealth are only achieved by the cultivation of Imagination. The possibilities of progress are unbounded, the control of the c and await the genius of Imagination to give them definite shape and form. Imagination is the seed from which blossom the flowers of a perfected Commonwealth.

APPLICATION:

Mrs. Ward's writings show extraordinary flights of imagination.

John Ericsson,	IV. 46
William Cullen Bryant,	IV. 80
Valentine Mott,	VI. 281
Garret A. Hobart,	XII. 10
John H. Patterson.	XIII. 281

INTERPRETATION:

1. Every man is prone to imitate those about him; but most of all he is inclined to imitate himself. The doing of anything makes it easier to do it again in the same way; and the repeti-tion becomes a Habit, which it is almost impossible to change. When the Habit is fixed, the thing is done while the mind is engaged upon something else. By Habit, which has become an instinct, the trained fingers play the piano without the attention of the mind. It is said, Edward Everett gave as a reason of his wonderful memory, that when a boy he read very earnestly, and at the foot of every page he obliged himself to review what he had read on that page. At first he had to read it three and four times before the contents became fixed firmly in his mind; but finally after reading a book once, he could almost recite it from beginning to end.

2. Every act, word and thought leaves an influence, and a tendency that makes a repetition casy, and make dissimilar acts, words and thoughts, harder to repeat. Consequences become causes; good brings forth good; evil produces evil. No act is isolated. It has some influence upon our future acts.

3. We are always powerfully affected by the good, or the evil, results of Habit. A tree must be rooted in the soil before it can bear flowers and fruit. A mature man is a bundle of habits. Carlyle said, "Habit is our supreme strength, our miserablest weakness."

4. Virtue is simply firmly established good Habits. Vice is confirmed wicked Habits. The domination of Habit often steals over men unnoticed. No one intends to become a liar, a thief, or a drunkard; but one act leads to another, until the evil is fastened on the man. We weave day by day a thread into the cable of Habit, until it becomes so strong we cannot break it. The only way to avoid bad Habits is by the careful cultivaway to avoid bad Habits is by the careful cultivation of good ones. This is particularly necessary in the formation of habits of cleanliness, selfcontrol, good temper, punctuality, etc.

5. A man's deeds are recorded to even the smallest detail. The Recording Angel is no myth; it is found in ourselves. It is the law of Habit. A man's life is spent writing his own hiography. If he indulges in vicious courses, and biography. If he indulges in vicious courses, and forms habits of inefficiency and idleness, he experiences a loss which no subsequent effort can retrieve. The Duke of Wellington said, "Habit is ten times Nature." The thing reaped is the thing sown multiplied a hundredfold. If you have sown the seed of life, you will reap life ever-lasting. An act of love makes the soul more loving; a deed of helpfulness, deepens self-derotion.

6. Rectitude is only the confirmed habit of doing what is right. Some men cannot tell a lie; the habit of truth-telling is fixed. Character building is right habit building.

7. "Sowing wild oats" is the devil's snare.
What a man sows, he reaps. The only thing to do with wild oats is to put them carefully into the fire, and burn every seed of them. If you sow them, as sure as there is a sun in heaven, they will come up,-and you, and nobody else will have to reap them.

8. Many an extraordinary man has been made out of a boy of ordinary qualities: but it is necessary to have four habits: punctuality, without which time is wasted; accuracy, without which mistakes hurtful to us are made; steadiness, or nothing will be done well: despatch, or opportunities will be lost which it will be impossible to recall. See Orville Dewey, "Notable Savings," page 238.

9. The daily deeds of individuals are recorded in the character and quality of the State, and the integrity of the nation demands the most careful attention to the Habits of daily life.

APPLICATION:

John Ericsson is an example of the efficacy of regular habits. Even during college life he laid down rules of action, and followed through life exact methods of living. Dr. Mott trained his left hand to be almost as skillful as the right.

INTERPRETATION:

1. Fidelity is faithfulness in all things; when tasks are intrusted to us,—to perform them without shirking; when work must be done,—to accomplish it without delay; when responsibility is laid upon us,—to shoulder the load, and fulfill the demand at any cost. Faithfulness carries out the small details of a duty, even when no one is looking. There is a story told of Olin L. Warner, who was asked why he gave so much pains to the portions of his work which could not be seen. He replied, "God sees."

2. Our study is life, and life is one; the virtues merge; they are but various aspects of the whole character. Truthfulness, Courage, Perseverance enter into the composition of Fidelity; but Fidelity has an additional distinct meaning. There is faith at the root of it. There is belief in the thing, or the person, winning such allegiance.

3. Life is religious. and so are its virtues.

3. Life is religious, and so are its virtues. With Fidelity we are brought into a higher plane of living. Fidelity is more than pluck; it is a loyalty or a devotion produced by conviction. But in its highest form the word Faithfulness may be used without need of distinction.

4. There is a practical flavor in Fidelity. It is recognited in friendship. In a life in Cod's more life.

4. There is a practical flavor in Fidelity. It is csecutial in friendship. In a life in God's world, Fidelity is a necessary virtue. Its best expressions are faithfulness to a high ideal of life and work, and faithfulness in the noble way of friendship.

5. Perhaps the greatest number of faults are comprised under thoughtlessness and carelessness, lack of vigilance. A captain of an ocean steamer goes down to dinner when the vessel is in a critical situation, and needs his care. He becomes interested in other matters, and forgets the peril of the ship until a disaster occurs. It is through just such heedlessness and lack of faithfulness that careers are ruined.

6. Faithfulness to high ideals finds its best exercise in Fidelity to the service of the State, which is our best inspiration for Moral Responsibility, Fraternal Obligation and Personal Consecration. The stability of the State rests upon the Fidelity, with which each performs his allotted work. Every individual has a duty to the State, and each is under obligation to perform his individual duty with absolute Fidelity. Even the child owes the Fidelity of faithful study.

Jefferson administered the government in exact accordance with the principles of the Declaration, which was the work of his pen, and upon his retirement found himself impoverished — practically a bank-rupt. Jefferson is also a fine example of justice. for upon his election to the presidency after an acrimonious campaign, he resisted powerful appeals to remove from office competent men simply because they had been inimical to him. Gen. Robert E. Lee was a Union man: but when his native state seceded, he felt obliged to go with it. Benton opposed J. C. Fremont's election even though he was his own son-in-law.

INTERPRETATION:

1. This trait is really a combination or culmination of others. Into its composition enter patriotism, fidelity, courage, self-reliance, fortitude, patience and others.

2. Determination whips every faculty to the front, and forces success. It is the spirit which says, "Where there is a will there is a way." It is Determination that makes a youth proof against temptations that undermine uprightness and virtue. Determination is more of the head and virtue. Determination is more of the head, while energy is more of the heart. It is the force that reduces decision to practice, and supplements it. Determination is the central force of character, and must be trained to habits of decision, otherwise it will be unable to resist evil, or follow good. Hence it is that inspired by energy of purpose, men of comparatively mediocre powers have often been enabled to accomplish such extraordinary results. For the men who have most powerfully influenced the world have not been so much men of genius, as men of strong convictions and enduring capacity for work, impelled by irresistible energy and invincible determination. It is the groundwork of Responsibility. The demand of Responsibility is that a man shall grasp the situation with comprehensive view, and then act with promptness and determined resolution.

3. Responsibility knows no little, or large opportunities. Small matters may prove large in results. We are beginning to learn that each one in the Republic has some responsibility. A government cannot go on as it ought if there is any shirking. The humblest citizen must see to it that his part is well done. "A Government of the people, by the people, for the people," calls for eternal vigilance, and that means Responsibility.

4. Conscience is that monitor within us which warns us when we are tempted to do wrong, and points out the right path. It is the guide of life and duty, and it is of the utmost importance that we obey the voice of conscience, for disobedience to it means the ruin of our character and life. Conscience makes clear to us what are our Responsibilities.

5. The pathos about the death of Waring points another lesson. The Responsibility of the explorer, the scientist, the reformer, the politician. often leads into the gravest dangers, and demands many other virtues. One must be brave, unsel-fish, sacrificing. One must love his pursuit, and follow it devotedly at ichaterer cost. Happy is that people who educate the young to ideals of this kind. Civic Responsibility can train heroes no less famous than generals and admirals.

6. The most valued citizen of the Commonwealth is he who accepts Responsibility in emergency. and faithfully executes the task. It is a rar-quality, and the State bestows her highest rewards upon those who possess it.

APPLICATION:

General Grant said very little, but no one could be with him five minutes without feeling that he was in the presence of a great character. He was calm, self-reliant, imperturbable either in defeat or victory. Andrew Jackson's determination called down upon him violent denunciation, but he never wavered. See Thomas II. Benton under "Notable Sayings," page 225. For centuries Havana had been a pestilential source. Thousands of lives had been sacrificed to its neglect of sani-tary regulations. Col. Waring was given the task of working out the correction of this evil, and he devoted to it the energy of his splendid manhood. until he accomplished it; but it cost him his life. John Sherman held positions of the highest trust under the Government.

Nathanael Greene took upon himself the responsibility of many of his movements against the British in the Revolutionary War. Patrick Henry's opposition to the Stamp Act in the Virginia Legislature, placed upon him the responsibility for the general movement, which resulted in the Revolution, and it was he who made the first overt act of war in its prosecution. Lowell said of Charles F. Adams, "None of our generals in the field, not even Grant himself, did us better service." Stanton was a man of tremendous determination, and wielded great influence in both Buchanan's and Lincoln's administrations. Henry l. Dawes says, that if Lincoln was essential to the success of the cause of the Union, it is no less true that Stan'on was essential to the success of Lincoln. Lincoln and Stanton were complements of one of the great instrumentalities which has had no parallel in history. Sheridan and Logan were such strong natures that upon their own responsibility they made important decisions. Morton was war governor of Indiana, and upon his own responsibility assumed obligation of over $1.000.000. See Samuel Houston, "Notable Sayings," page 252.

Felix Adler,	I. 378
Julia Ward Howe,	i. 402

INTERPRETATION:

1. Hopefulness is the natural attitude of children and young people. It should be taken as such, and emphasized. The contrast between Hopefulness and despair should be made prominent. The native worth of Hopefulness should be insisted upon, for it is a virtue worth having, and worth keeping on into age. It helps in doing things. It makes happier the person who has it; and how contagious it is! — making for happier conditions about us.

2. As an inheritance, it should be treasured, and should be cultivated. The leaders of men are those who are full of some great and fruitful idea. That was the merit of Columbus. And he, who is thus possessed, sees clearly, and maintains a cheerful courage, where common men tremble and rebel.

3. While Hopefulness, like beauty, is a divine gift, yet it can be cultivated; and cultivated with persistence, it becomes Enthusiasm. Enthusiasm signifies "God in us," which is its noblest defini-tion. Enthusiasm strengthens the heart and strengthens the will; it gives force to the thought, and nerve to the hand, until what was only a possibility becomes a reality. Enthusiasm is the compelling power that overcomes all obstacles.
4. "With all thy getting, get understanding."

But more than this, get Enthusiasm, for this gives new courage to the timid, new hope to the disheartened, and increase of power to the strong! The inventors, the musicians, the poets, the heroes, the martyrs, the pioneers of every enterprise, in every clime, in every age, have been Enthusiasts. Enthusiasm is the soul of work, and of life itself.

5. Never before has Enthusiasm such an opportunity as to-day. It is the age of young men and young women. The world waits for them. Foreshadowed inventions wait for the "passionate patience" of Enthusiasm to develop them. Every occupation, every profession, every field of en-deavor calls for Enthusiasm to harvest them. Success is more often due to Enthusiasm than to al ility.

XXXI. CHARACTER: Its Value and Meaning.

These various traits of Character illustrate the principles of Morality which underlie all right living.

A principle is the starting point in thought or life. With the science of geometry the first principles are called axioms; and to prove its propositions true, one endeavors to trace back his reasoning to one or more axioms, which no one disputes. Principle, in morals, is the starting point in our lives. The test of the morality of every act or speech is to ask the question, "Is it right?" "Is it kind?" "Is it fair?" "Is it true?" The answer to these questions will show what is proper to do. To remember and practice this rule is one of the best means of perfecting Character.

Character is what a man is, not what Reputation considers him. Character is one's intrinsic ralue, not his value in the market of public opinion. It is not learning—it is worth opinion. It is not learning,—it is worth. Samuel Smiles says, "Character is one of the greatest motive powers in the world. In its noblest embodiments it exemplifies human nature in its highest form, for it exhibits man at his best." In 1798, when it was expected that France would declare war against the United States, John Adams, who was then president, wrote to Washington, "We must have your name, if you will permit us to use it. There will be more efficacy in it than in an army." This illustrates the power and influence of his personal character, which was greater than his generalship or his statesmanship.

Character is better security than capital. In the exigencies of business and events capital may be lost, but Character remains intact, unharmed by any pecuniary loss, and is trusted to rehabilitate lost fortune. Stephen V. White (see Vol. V., page 478), a New York financier, became involved and only able to pay 35 cents on the dollar. His Character for honesty and integrity was so established, that his creditors gave him an absolute, legal release from an indebtedness of almost a million. Within about a year he repaid principal and interest. Prof. Blaikey says. "Money is not needful, power is not needful, cleverness is not needful, fame is not needful. liberty is not needful, even health is not the one-thing needful; but Character alone is that which can truly save us."

Character is greater than intellect. How many of the brilliant intellects about us are besmirched by faults and vices so grave, that they have faller from their high estate, and now none so poor to do them reverence! Smiles has again said, "Everyone is in duty bound to aim at reaching the highest standard of Character; not to become the richest in means, but in spirit; not the greatest in worldly position, but in true honor; now the most intellectual, but the most virtuous; not the most powerful and intellectual, but the most truthful, upright and honest."

The opportunities for the education of mind and heart and hand are in this country unparalleled; and if the hearts of its youth could be filled with such an inspiration and determination. this Republic would lead the world in high principles and beneficent direction, as well as in greatness and glory.

It is a duty that every one owes to the State. to strive to make himself worthy of the highest places. It is individual morality which determines the character of the State. The young people of to-day are to be the citizens of the future, and the State looks to them to aim at high ideals, and to strive after perfection, as the hope and promise of her advancing glory. Let everyone, in the holy of holies of his own heart, swear an oath of fealty to the State, that he will be true to himself, to his best ideals, to his conscience. Let him raise the Flag of our ('ountry in his heart, and salute it daily, as the emblern of the world's hope and inspiration. The fulfilling of that allegiance is the doing daily the little things of life, with serious thought and determination, and in striving with all one's might to attain to the fulfillment of Character, as exemplified in the Traits herein set forth.

Take these thoughts with you for the year; go down into the valley with your, brothers, and work them out in life.

- STOPFORD A. BROOKE.

CHARACTER: ITS INFLUENCE UPON THE WORLD.

A PLEA FOR THE ABOLITION OF WAR AND UNIVERSAL PEACE.

The inevitable fruits of a perfected Character are beneficence and inspiration, which constitute goodness. Great men influence the world by the very force of this goodness; and it is this leaven of goodness that brings about the betterment of humanity and the amelioration of the suffering in the world.

The particular gospel attracting the attention of all good men throughout the world to-day is Fraternization. This, in its essence, is the application of the Golden Rule to society, and is the ideal of the highest Socialism. Perhaps the greatest movement in the direction of Fraternization is the advocacy of International Peace, which has been given a new stimulus by the calling of The Hague Peace Conference, May 18, 1899, for the purpose of establishing an International Tribunal of Arbitration.

Of all the evils that have-afflicted mankind, War is unquestionably the worst. While English speaking nations have abolished slavery, duelling and many other evils, there still remains this foulest blot upon modern civilization—the savage custom of settling International disputes by the slaughter of thousands of innocent men, who have no interest or voice in the quarrel. This is, in real fact, national duelling, and the curious anomaly is presented, that while the conscience of English speaking countries has forbidden duelling in individual quarrels, it is still retained in national disputes.

quarrels, it is still retained in national disputes.

The Abolition of War would be the greatest blessing to mankind, beyond every other benefit possible to conceive. All the Sacred Writings of the world condemn war, and all the great characters, from Homer (50 B. C.), to the present time, have denounced War, as the greatest evil ever visited upon mankind; and yet only until recently has any progress been made towards its abolition. Now, peace conferences are being held in many of the world centres. Societies, made up of all peoples and creeds, are being established everywhere, to advocate and advance International Arbitration as the practical means toward the accomplishment of this great end, Arbitration is submitting questions in dispute to qualified judges for their determination, as Courts of Law decide between litigants. This principle has become the stepping stone towards the formation of an International Tribunal, which shall be given the power to compel nations to keep the peace of the world, in the same manner as the Supreme Court of the United States judges, and enforces its decisi ns between individual States, the area of some of which is larger even than all Europe. It will be no novelty to this Nation; it is simply the extension of an agency and power, which has already been proved to be easily workable and eminently successful. Think of our Supreme Court settling a boundary dispute between khode Island and Massachusetts, which, in a foreign country, would have inevitably involved war, and yet it was done so quietly that scarcely anybody ever heard of it!

The United States was the first to propose International Arbitration, and it is hoped that this Western Republic, upon which has been vouchsafed the highest civilization and the largest enlightenment, is d stined to be the great Peace power of the world; and, it is believed that it is the duty of this Republic to lead the nations to Universal Fraternization, Disarmament and Peace.

The best thought of the country believes that the way to foster and advance these ideals to their accomplishment, is to have a knowledge of Peace ideas and principles thoroughly instilled into our youth in the public schools, because as progress in this direction has been so slow, it is probable that upon them will devolve the task of its final accomplishment. In line with the obligation imposed upon all instructors of youth, to inculcate morality and build up Character, it is proposed to set apart, annually, May 18, the anniversary of the opening of The Hague Peace Conference, as a day for the purpose of emphasizing the blessings of Peace, of showing the superiority of Arbitration over War, and of exalting the brotherhood of man and of nations, by appropriate exercises, and the study of the literature of the movement.

Perhaps the first thing to become familiar with is Carlyle's description of the artisans of England and France:—"Thirty stand fronting thirty, each with a gun in his hand. Straightway the word 'fire' is given, and they blow the souls out of one another; and, in place of sixty brisk, useful craftsmen, the world has sixty dead carcasses, which it must bury, and anew shed tears for. Had these men any quarrel? Busy as the devil is, not the smallest! They lived far enough apart, were there was even, unconsciously, by commerce, some mutual helpfulness between them. How then? Simpleton! Their governors had fallen out, and, instead of shooting one another, had the cunning to make these poor blockheads shoot."

Just in proportion as a young man becomes truly intelligent, he realizes that he alone is responsible for his selection of an occupation; and no president, king or emperor will be able in the future to coerce him into the business of killing his fellowmen for hire. The "Judge within" begins to rule, and he will no longer adopt a military or naval profession, that makes him "food for powder" at the whim or caprice of rulers, over trivial matters, which should be settled by Arbitration.

The movement now stirring the civilized world for the Abolition of War has never been so wide-spread and vigorous as it has been since the calling of The Hague Conference by the Czar of Russia; and to complete the realization of this great hope of mankind, every political party should immediately demand of the government, when an International dispute arises, that the matter be referred to Arbitration. If one's party refuses to make it an issue, every real lover of his country should break with his party. Peace is above party. Lay aside politics until the war issue is settled! When the country is enlightened, no party can hope for success, that refuses to make the demand for Arbitration its first business.

There can be no more efficient service rendered to the Republic than arousing a strong demonstration in opposition and remonstrance to any action tending toward War; and in time of peace, spreading throughout the land the knowledge of what is being done toward universal Peace, and the means of furthering the great movement, until "men shall beat their swords into ploughshares, and their spears into pruning hooks."
